F. D. R. WIELDS REPEAL WHIP

Personally Appeals to South To Follow Party Platform For Repeal.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The campaign for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment today assumed the proportions of an administration drive to whip the Democratic south into line against prohibition. The administration's influence became a decisive factor in the prohibition war after President Roosevelt publicly appealed to the Democratic south to support his party's platform declaration for repeal. It put his stamp of approval on the repeal efforts of Postmaster General James L. Farley, who has been urging Democratic leaders to fight for repeal in every state.

The president's personal appeal was addressed particularly to Democrats in the southern states of Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee, which vote next week on ratification of the repeal amendment. The liberals were jubilant, believing the president's influence would swing all three states into the repeal camp and sound a death-knell to national prohibition before Christmas.

New 45-Cent Ordinance Passed Unanimously by Council; Fight Is Expected.

FOLLOW OHIO COURT

Gas Company Makes Statement On Decision.

Sweeping reduction in the gas rate for Washington C. H. has been unanimously approved by the council of that city at a special meeting. The new rate is in accordance with the ruling of the Ohio supreme court on 48-cent gas. Washington C. H., however, went three cents better passing a 45-cent rate.

The city now pays $1 for the first 500 cubic feet; 60 cents for each 1,000 cubic feet up to 19,500 and 55 cents per 1,000 above 19,500.

The ordinance as approved by the council would run for two years. The matter of a rate reduction such as this has not been taken up with the Dayton Power & Light Co. so a battle in court can be expected.

ORDINANCE READY

The local council has been contemplating action on gas rates and now has an ordinance presented by Paul E. Adkins, city solicitor, before it. This ordinance calls for 43-cent net gas while the present rate is about 63 cents. The ordinance has been read the second time and will be ready for a vote after its third reading. When this will be is not known, however. The ordinance was read the first time last November then was brought up last Wednesday for its second reading.

While Washington C. H. council was passing its lower rate schedule, Harold M. Jay, Chillicothe, manager of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., in this district, made a statement Saturday that the supreme court ruling might not work so favorably in other Ohio cities as at first expected.

According to comparisons made by officials of the Ohio Fuel Gas Company, the same principles involved in determining the Columbus rate.

15 Victims of Traffic With Six Other Deaths Reported in Week End

INTERURBAN KILLS 6

Wedding Trip Ends Fatally for Bride

By International News Service

With at least 15 persons dead as the result of accidents and six others victims of violence, Ohio today counted a high week-end fatality toll, an International News Service survey revealed.

Traffic accidents claimed ten lives—six in one interurban crash alone. A Columbus girl was killed in an automobile mishap while on her wedding trip, and a man met death in a highway accident near Ironton while he was being rushed to a hospital for treatment of a bullet wound in his shoulder.

Unusual accidents, a drowning and suicide, and at least six deaths as the result of shootings and stabbings contributed to the high week-end toll.

Three persons were instantly killed and three others died later of their injuries after their automobile was struck by a Cincinnati and Lake Erie interurban car at a crossing south of Miamisburg.

Louise Hudec, 23, of Columbus, met death near Middletown, when the automobile in which she and her intended husband were riding to their wedding overthrew three times and smashed into a ditch. Her fiancé, John S. Morgan, 24, of Columbus, was seriously injured.

Shot in the shoulder at an ice cream social at Scottown, O., William H. Dailey, 21, was being taken to a hospital when the automobile in which he was riding was demolished in a wreck. Dailey was dead when taken from the car, and five others were injured.

Alfred E. Straub, 35, of Cleveland was killed when the auto he was driving swerved from the road and struck a tree in Avon Lake village.

DEATH CHARGE FACES 'STUDE'

SPRINGFIELD, July 10.—Theodore A. Holmes, handsome 20-year-old college student held in the mysterious fatal shooting of Mrs. Nora Coffey, 24, today was subjected to further interrogation about his claim that the killing was accidental.

Holmes, who allegedly confessed that he was a companion the night she was killed, and that he threw her body into the Little Miami river near Xenia because of fright, was visited at his cell in Clark-co jail early this morning and called upon for additional details of the sensational Springfield case.

A trip to the banks of the river, where the young Springfield wife was shot as she sat with Holmes in an automobile on a night last spring following a dance, was planned during the day by authorities, who announced that Holmes would be interrogated in detail at the scene.

Holmes, a resident of Winsted, Conn., and a student in aeronautical engineering at Antioch college at Yellow Springs, near here, has steadfastly maintained that the woman was shot accidentally.

In his purported confession, made in New York while he was being brought here following his arrest, he contended the killing resulted from a playful skirmish over a revolver. He is held without charge.

SLOT MACHINE WAR IS BEGUN IN LANCASTER

Police Chief and Sheriff Face Action Against Their Confiscation.

PETITION IN COURT

Columbus Distributors Seeking Court's Aid.

LANCASTER, July 10.—This city found itself in the midst of a "slot machine war" today as a result of an action filed Saturday to enjoin Chief of Police Gail Sessler and Sheriff William Belhorn from arresting dealers and confiscating vending machines in the city and county.

The action was brought by Frank W. Sharp and John Whalen, Columbus sellers and distributors of the machines, in common pleas court.

The officers, nevertheless, intend to continue confiscating the machines. Belhorn said "Once they are approved by law, it will be alright with me but until then we'll take them out."

The petition of the operators says they have entered into contracts with certain merchants for the sale of minis through the vending machines and that they have expended a large amount of money in the operation of their business.

DECLARE LAWFUL

They contend their method of disposing of the minis is lawful.

A permanent injunction restraining the officers from confiscating the machines is asked and it is also urged in the petition that the officers be restrained from interfering with customers of the machines.

Sheriff Belhorn has confiscated six machines, three at Baltimore, one at Custer's Point, one at Rushville and one at a filling station at the North Berne and Rushville roads.

Slot machines in this county were removed by Sheriff Charles Radcliff two years ago.

"Happy Triangle" Foiled By Intervention Of Law

RACINE, Wis., July 10.—The machinations of the law puzzled Jay Beagle as he sat in his dreary and lonely cell in the county jail here today, contemplating the 18-month penitentiary sentence he is about to serve.

Beagle's "eternal triangle" was equilateral, until the law stepped into his happy home and made it "acute."

In another cell sat pretty Lydia Weber, 22, sentenced to 90 days in jail.

And in the little cottage where Beagle, Lydia, and Beagle's divorced wife Linda had lived in domestic felicity, Linda watched the two children at play, wondering how she would support them while their father paid society for some crime which she could not understand.

The purchase price of the properties was not disclosed by Mr. Harlor.

Unusual accidents, a drowning and suicide, and at least six deaths as the result of shootings and stabbings contributed to the high week-end toll.

Three persons were instantly killed and three others died later of their injuries after their automobile was struck by a Cincinnati and Lake Erie interurban car at a crossing south of Mansfield.

Louise Hucle, 23, of Columbus, met death near Middletown, when the automobile in which she and her intended husband were riding to their wedding overturned three times and smashed into a ditch. Her fiancé, John S. Morgan, 24, of Columbus, was seriously injured.

Shot in the shoulder at an ice cream social at Scottown, O., William H. Dailey, 21, was being taken to a hospital when the automobile in which he was riding was demolished in a wreck. Dailey was dead when taken from the car, and five others were injured.

Alfred E. Straub, 35, of Cleveland was killed when the auto he was driving swerved from the road and struck a tree in Avon Lake village.

SPRINGFIELD, July 10.—Theodore A. Holmes, handsome 20-year-old college student held in the mysterious fatal shooting of Mrs. Nora Coffey, 24, today was subjected to further interrogation about his claim that the killing was accidental.

Holmes, who allegedly confessed that he was a companion the night she was killed, and that he threw her body into the Little Miami river near Xenia because of fright, was visited at his cell in Clarke-co jail early this morning and called upon for additional details of the sensational Springfield case.

A trip to the banks of the river, where the young Springfield wife was shot as she sat with Holmes in an automobile on a night last spring following a dance, was planned during the day by authorities, who announced that Holmes would be interrogated in detail at the scene.

Holmes, a resident of Winsted, Conn., and a student in aeronautical engineering at Antioch college at Yellow Springs, near here, has steadfastly maintained that the woman was shot accidentally.

In his purported confession, made in New York while he was being brought here following his arrest, he contended the killing resulted from a playful skirmish over a revolver. He is held without charge.

SLOT MACHINE WAR IS BEGUN IN LANCASTER

Police Chief and Sheriff Face Action Against Their Confiscation.

PETITION IN COURT

Columbus Distributors Seeking Court's Aid.

LANCASTER, July 10.—This city found itself in the midst of a 'slot machine war' today as a result of an action filed Saturday to enjoin Chief of Police Gail Seiler and Sheriff William Belhorn from arresting dealers and confiscating mint vending machines in the city and county.

The action was brought by Frank W. Sharp and John Whalen, Columbus sellers and distributors of the machines, in common pleas court.

The officers, nevertheless, intend to continue confiscating the machines. Belhorn said "Once they are approved by law, it will be alright with me but until then we'll take them out."

The petition of the operators says they have entered into contracts with certain merchants for the sale of mints through the vending machines and that they have expended a large amount of money in the operation of their business.

DECLARE LAWFUL

They contend their method of disposing of the mints is lawful.

A permanent injunction restraining the officers from confiscating the machines is asked and it is also urged in the petition that the officers be restrained from interfering with customers of the machines.

Sheriff Belhorn has confiscated six machines, three at Ballinore, one at Custer's Point, one at Rushville and one at a filling station at the North Berne and Rushville roads.

Slot machines in this county were removed by Sheriff Charles Radcliff two years ago.

"Happy Triangle" Foiled By Intervention Of Law

RACINE, Wis., July 10.—The machinations of the law puzzled Jay Beagle as he sat in his dreary and lonely cell in the county jail here today, contemplated the 18-month penitentiary sentence he is about to serve.

Beagle's "eternal triangle" was equilateral, until the law stepped into his happy home and made it "acute."

In another cell sat pretty Lydia Weber, 22, sentenced to 90 days in jail.

And in the little cottage where Beagle, Lydia, and Beagle's divorced wife Linda had lived in domestic felicity, Linda watched the two children at play, wondering how she would support them while their father paid society for some crime which she could not understand.

"For," she declared, "if Jay was doing wrong, it was the children and me he was wronging. But we were all living happily together until policemen came and took away Jay and Lydia."

Beagle was divorced from his wife June 27, but under Wisconsin law couldn't remarry for a year. Lydia was censured at home because of the affair with Beagle and

TO TRANSFER DEEDS

Statement of Policy Awaited From Purina

Announcement of sale of elevators and mills of Crites Inc. in this county to the Ralston-Purina Co., nationally-known feed manufacturers, was made Monday by J. C. Harlor, Columbus, attorney for Crites Inc.

The purchase price of the properties was not disclosed by Mr. Harlor.

A later communication from Attorney Harlor this afternoon disclosed that the Mt. Sterling and Frankfort properties of Crites Inc., are included in the sale.

Details of the sale were concluded at a meeting Saturday afternoon in Columbus.

lor who said the deal would be consummated as soon as deeds are properly transferred.

The Ralston-Purina Co. will then take over the properties and will later announce its policies and intentions concerning Circleville and Pickaway-co operation.

DEAL LARGE ONE

The deal is one of the biggest in Pickaway-co's history involving property valued by H. M. Crites, S. Court-st., at little less than one half million dollars. The S. Court-st. plant, Mr. Crites pointed out, is valued at $350,000 while others are rated from $30,000 to $10,000.

Only two plants held by Crites Inc. are not included in the deal. They are at Mt. Sterling and at Frankfort both of which are in litigation Attorney Harlor said all other plants are included in the sale. They are the mill and elevator on S. Court-st., the elevators on E. Main-st., on the Island-rd. and west of the city on the Williamsport-pk., besides those at Bell's siding, Ashville, New Holland, Kinderhook and Cook's station. The latter elevator cost Mr. Crites $30,000, he disclosed.

"The Ralston-Purina Co., Mr. Crites said, "is the largest feed company in the nation. Its main offices are at St. Louis and it has important branches in every leading city in the grain area of the country."

NOT TO RETIRE

Mr. Crites does not expect to retire from the grain business, however. He became interested in that business in 1892 and in 1918 acquired the S. Court-st. mill. He built the elevator now owned and operated by the Pickaway Grain Co. "I am not retiring from the grain business," Mr. Crites declared, "and I do not intend to retire as long as there is a wheel barrow in Circleville."

It is hoped a statement concerning its intentions can be obtained from the Ralston-Purina Co. within a few days.

Hunted Glasses With Match, Car Lost In Flames

Auto Rests in Ditch After Accident; Columbus, Thatcher Persons Involved.

Wallace Morgan, of 306 Fairwood-ave, Columbus, escaped uninjured late Sunday when his car sideswiped the Chevrolet roadster of Edward Hanley, near Thatcher, at the bottom of Earnhart Hill, Adelphi-pk. east of Circleville, and then burned in the ditch.

According to Morgan's story told to Deputy Sheriff Bob Armstrong, the Columbus man got out of the car to look for his glasses when it stopped in a ditch. He struck a match to aid in the search and the car went up in flames. It was so completely burned that it could not be identified.

In the car with Hanley were Ged Dresbach and Kathryn Moore, also of near Thatcher.

A Progressive Step

TEXTILE operators in voluntarily proposing abolition of child labor have made a revolutionary move in this industry. One of the most serious charges long standing against textile operators has been ruthless exploitation of child labor.

While there probably was exaggeration of conditions in the attacks made against them, it nevertheless was a fact that numerous child workers were to be found in cotton mills, many of them being children of very young years. Chief responsibility, of course, rested upon the parents, but it was charged that such low wages were paid it was necessary for families to put their children to work in order to find support for them.

The decision to bar from factories in the future, under the textile industrial code, children under 16 years of age, was made by T. M. Marchant, president of the Cotton Manufacturers' association. "Our cotton textile industry," he said at the hearing before Administrator Johnson, "believes that it would be helpful to the broad movement, if the administrator is agreeable, to put an express provision in the cotton textile code that the employment of minors under 16 years of age be not permitted during the emergency."

The administrator not only was agreeable but congratulated the cotton manufacturers upon their stand. The emergency period which the code will cover is two years. The probability of the prohibition becoming a permanent policy in the industry, however, is strong, especially if the code experiment proves successful.

Escape cannot understand what this country is about but fears it will not benefit Europe.

Lynchings

ALTHOUGH there was one more lynching in the United States in the first six months of this year than in the same period last year, the situation with respect to mob law has some encouraging features.

The total of six this year is nine less than the total 10 years ago, according to figures compiled by Tuskegee institute. This represents a distinct advance for the cause of justice as opposed to mob law.

That part of the report showing the prevention by the constituted authorities of 14 lynchings involving 17 persons is another feature of the report that deserves special attention. It shows that the officers not only had the proper understanding of their duties but that they were diligent in performing them.

The fact that lynching has not kept proportionate pace with other forms of major law violations seems to indicate that the war on this crime is making gratifying progress. No let-up in the drive should be permitted.

There is no proper place in a civilized land for mob action. A spotless record is the objective to be sought. Even if this is never attained, the work in its behalf will have yielded highly creditable results.

"MARY FAITH"

by Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith and Kimberley Farrell have been engaged for some time. Mary Faith, beautiful young orphan, gives up her position as secretary to Mark Nesbit when Kim sets their wedding date. His attitude changes brusquely when his mother objects. The latter treats Mary Faith coldly. Heartbroken, Mary Faith returns to her office and breaks the news to her co-workers. Mark, alone ill, has Mary Faith driven to his country home, daily, for two weeks. He tells her of his love for her. She halts him, saying she will never love anyone as she did Kim. While in a jewelry store with Mark, selecting a Christmas ring for his sister, Mary Faith meets Kim with a girl. Next morning, Kim calls at Mary Faith's boarding house. He assures her of his love and proposes immediate marriage. Mary Faith melts in his arms. Mary Faith tells Mark she is leaving to marry Kim. After a hasty marriage, Mary Faith and Kim drive to his aunt's house in a neighboring town. For two weeks they live their honeymoon in ecstasy. They return to town and find Kim's mother ill. Kim's aunt is present. Mary Faith is called a "poisoner" by Kim's friends, Claire and Jack Maldon, at a Sunday night party when she refuses to play cards or dance. Kim dances with Claire. Mary Faith renounces the Farrell apartment during Mrs. Farrell's absence.

CHAPTER XIX

When Kim came home the table would be set and an appetizing odor of broiling steak or other meat would come drifting out of the kitchen whenever the door swung open.

His house slippers would be standing on the floor beside his chair and the evening paper would be neatly folded on his little smoking table.

"I'm afraid you've married a very dull sort of woman, Kim," Mary Faith told him one night when they were walking home from the movies. "I'm more interested in you and in taking care of your house than I am in anybody or anything else under the sun. I'm just a plain garden-variety housewife, I guess."

"You're the loveliest wife that a man ever had," Kim answered her, and he stopped in the darkness of the night to kiss her.

It was on Thursday. On Friday night the Maldons came over to spend the evening.

Mary Faith brought out a card table and the four of them played bridge, but not for money. At eleven o'clock Mary Faith went into the kitchen and came back with cheese sandwiches and coffee on a tray. She was very proud of her hand-embroidered table cover and the dainty, pink-sprigged china dishes.

"We had a good time, didn't we?" she asked Kim as the door closed upon Claire and Jack. "And we didn't have to gamble or drink to enjoy ourselves, either, did we?"

He looked at her and his eyes were full of disgust and anger. "What are you talking about?" he said. "You don't imagine they had a good time sitting around here without a thing to drink but coffee, do you?—We didn't even have a new dance record to pep things up. No, they had a rotten time; and if you had any sense about such things you'd know it."

On Sunday night Claire Maldon called Kim up.

Mary Faith heard him answer the telephone when it rang. She heard him say, "Wait a minute, Claire. I'll ask her."

And then he came into the sitting room, where she sat reading the woman's section of the Sunday paper.

"Claire wants us to go over there and play some poker," he said. "She says they have a crowd of people in for supper. . . . Let's go, Mary Faith. Everybody plays cards on Sunday; and we've done nothing but sit around this flat, dying of dry-rot, for a month or more."

Mary Faith looked up at him with troubled eyes.

"Kim, you and I never have played cards on Sunday," she answered. "Why should we start to do it now?—Besides, the Maldons play for money, and I wouldn't gamble even on a week-day. I don't want to go, Kim."

He stood staring into space for a minute or two. Then he shrugged his shoulders.

"Suit yourself," he said. "But I hope you won't mind if I go. I'd like to get out of this place for a couple of hours. After all, Sunday is the only day in the week that I have to myself. . . . I like to see people once in a while. You never ask anybody here."

"You won't let me ask Jean Bartlett here," Mary Faith reminded him. "And you know we used to have lots of fun with Jean and the men she used to pal around with. . . . Kim, I don't like you to get into the habit of drinking and gambling with those Maldons. You never used to do things like that."

Kim started back to the telephone. "Well, I'm doing them now," he said as he walked away from her. "I suppose I still have some personal liberty even if I am a married man."

She heard him tell Claire that he'd be right over. Then she heard him go on down the hall to his bedroom. She got up presently and followed him.

He was standing at his dresser, plastering his blond hair close to his head with two wet brushes.

"Kim, I don't know what to do about the Maldons," Mary Faith said, her eyes meeting his in the cloudy mirror above the dresser. "They're nice people, but I think they're too swift for us. . . . At the same time I think that a wife ought to be a good sport. I'd always made up my mind to like your friends and to go wherever you went."

"Well, why don't you go then instead of talking about it so much?" Kim cut her short. "Playing cards on Sunday isn't one of the seven deadly sins, whether you know it or not."

"Oh, I wasn't going to play cards even if I went!" Mary Faith interrupted him this time. "I thought I'd go and read while the rest of you played. I'd have just as good a time as the rest of you, and I wouldn't bother anyone."

Kim thought that over for a moment. "No, that wouldn't do," he decided. "You'd be just a wet blanket, sitting there by yourself, refusing to take a drink or enter into the spirit of things. . . . If you're not going to go and behave yourself like a human being you'd better stay here."

He took out his bill-fold and took a ten-dollar note from it. Then, with a grin, he handed her the bill-fold. "That's all I'm going to take with me," he said, pocketing the ten dollars. "When I've lost that I'll leave. . . . Ten dollars are all those sharks are going to get from me this night, my girl."

It was long after midnight when he came home. Mary Faith was in bed and he did not turn on the light in the room when he came in. She heard him stumble against a chair. Then he sat down heavily on the side of the bed.

"You can turn on the light, Kim. I'm awake," she said.

He turned it on and stood, blinking at her, in the sudden white radiance. His hat was on the back of his head and his overcoat was thrown wide open. He took it off and Mary Faith saw that he had only a vest under it.

"Where's your coat?" she asked him sharply, and he looked down at himself and began to smile sheepishly.

"I took it off while we were playing poker," he explained, "and I must have left it at the Maldons'. Don't worry about it, Mary Faith. Jack'll bring it down to the office in the morning."

He was shaking all over. "Cold, isn't it?" he asked. "Cold as Greenland!"

Mary Faith got out of bed and put on her kimono and slippers. "You're cold," she said. "You hop into bed and I'll get you something hot to drink."

In the kitchen she heated some milk and filled a hot water bottle. When she came back into the bedroom he was sound asleep, and his mother was tucking an extra blanket around his shoulders. She looked at Mary Faith, and spoke to her in a whisper.

"He's been drinking," she said. "He's just like his father before him—too fond of a good time. How many times his father came home to me just like this! I got tired of it after a while and so I left him."

She started out of the room. "You'll get tired of it, too," she threw the words over her shoulder as she went.

Kim slept until eleven o'clock the next morning although Mary Faith went into his room three times and did her best to wake him up. When he finally did get up he showed no ill effects of the night before. His eyes were clear and his skin was fresh and ruddy.

He sang "I've Been Working on the Railroad" as he took his shower, and he ate his usual large breakfast, taking his own good time about it.

"It's almost noon, Kim," Mary Faith said to him when he had finished and was opening the morning paper. "Don't you think I ought to call up the office and tell them that you're on your way? They'll be wondering where you are, won't they?"

Kim glanced at her over the top of the paper, his eyes narrowed. "What are you trying to do? Nag me out of the house?" he asked. "No, you don't have to call up the office and tell them anything. I'm still capable of running my own business even if I am married!"

Mary Faith did not answer him. She left him and went back into the bedroom and began to put it into order. . . . Kim was just like a spoiled child sometimes, she reflected later, when he was gone and she was washing his breakfast dishes.

For instance he was always sulky if anyone looked at the morning paper before he did. He didn't like to see it when it had been opened and "rumbled up," so he said.

Then there was the matter of the bathroom. He let it be clearly understood that he wanted to have the use of it at any time between half past seven and half past eight. And when he walked out of it, the walls and floor would be running with water because he always forgot to draw the shower curtain, and his pajamas would be lying in a corner along with the wad of wet bath towels that he had used.

But that sort of thing did not worry Mary Faith in the least. To pick up after Kim was part of her job as a good wife and she did it cheerfully.

Every Monday morning she and Mrs. Farrell did the washing, and every Tuesday Mary Faith did the ironing alone.

"I like to iron," she told her mother-in-law "I like the nice warm smell of the iron and the way it leaves a nice smooth trail behind it as it goes—and besides, think of the money we're saving!"

Mrs. Farrell had been sending the washing out to a laundry that had charged anywhere from three to five dollars a week for doing it.

Decrease In Goiter Is Reported

Survey Shows Fewer Sufferers Even in "Goiter Districts"

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

AN IMPORTANT announcement was made at the recent Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons held in Washington. There was reported a marked decrease in goiter throughout the country.

This is welcome news because only a decade ago the number of goiter cases was increasing alarmingly. But a careful survey shows a decrease in the number of sufferers from this affliction, not only in the western states, but in the territories formerly known as the "goiter districts."

Goiter formation, enlargement of the thyroid gland in the neck, is associated with a lack of iodine in the system. It has been prevalent, particularly in the Great Lakes region.

Due to Lack of Iodine

In 1916 Dr. David Marine showed that the disturbance was due to a lack of iodine in the water supply of those cities where the inhabitants suffered from this disorder.

Fortunately, simple goiter is a disease that is easily prevented. Persons who reside in so-called goiter districts are advised to include foods in their diet that are rich in iodine content.

Yet I must warn you against the indiscriminate use of iodine or iodized preparations. It should not be resorted to without medical advice. A lack of iodine in the system is associated with simple goiter only. Its value is limited to this type of thyroid disturbance. Of course there are many other forms of thyroid disease besides simple goiter.

Other Thyroid Disturbances

For example, "exophthalmic goiter" is another disturbance of the thyroid gland. In this affliction there is an increase in the secretion of "thyroxine," a substance found in the thyroid gland. The sufferer presents thyroid enlargement, bulging of the eyes and palpitation of the heart. It is a serious disturbance that demands the utmost care in its treatment.

Another form is that known as "adenomatous goiter." This is caused by alternate enlargement and shrinkage of certain parts of the thyroid gland. In many instances this type of goiter can be removed only by an operation. The operation is called "thyroidectomy," the removal of the thyroid gland.

The control of goiter in this country is an outstanding achievement of medical science. We are to be congratulated that the research workers have been so successful.

OHIO REPEAL GROUP ELECTS DELEGATES

COLUMBUS, July 14.—Fifty-two delegates-at-large to the Ohio constitutional convention pledged to ratification of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment were filed with Secretary of State George S. Myers here today by the Ohio Repeal Council.

This council is the recognized state-wide organization working for ratification of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and repeal of the Ohio prohibition amendment at the November election.

It combines the efforts of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the Women's Organization for Prohibition Reform, The Crusaders, the Ohio Hotel Association, the Ohio Federation of Labor and the Voluntary Committee of Lawyers of the American Bar Association in a concerted campaign to defeat prohibition.

NON-PARTISAN GROUP
The list of delegates filed is thoroughly non-partisan and provides for representation of every section of the state.

Included are key Democrats and Republicans acceptable to both parties, but for the greater part the list is without political complexion.

Each delegate is pledged to vote for ratification of the Twenty-first Amendment to the federal constitution which repeals the Eighteenth Amendment.

It is the intention of the Ohio Repeal Council to obtain the number of signatures necessary to have these fifty-two names on the Nov. 7 ballot in the column designated "For Ratification."

The organization is proceeding in its preparation for the November election without regard to the proposed referendum on the Mosier law which sets up the machinery for choosing the delegates to the convention and which has been attacked in the courts.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVE TO BE A CHAMPION FENCER

● ABOVE—THERE IS NOTHING LIKE FENCING for bringing out the condition of a man's nerves. The quick reflexes and perfect coordination of healthy nerves helped George Santelli, former Olympic fencer, win the Open Saber Championship of the United States.

● LEFT—GEORGE SANTELLI, who says: "I can enjoy as many Camels as I want and still know that my nerves are fit."

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

"A man can't fence his best unless his nerves are healthy," says George Santelli. "Fencing is one of the fastest sports there is—you've got to keep your reflexes and nerves in perfect condition. As a coach, I have fencing appointments from seven-thirty in the morning until ten or eleven at night. I can enjoy as many Camels as I want and still know that my nerves are ready and fit when fast action is needed."

Camels, with their costlier tobaccos, give a pleasure that never fades. Steady smokers find them always mild...cool...pleasing. They do not fray the nerves or leave a "cigarette" aftertaste. Start smoking Camels today—for the new enjoyment you will find in a milder cigarette—for the sake of your nerves.

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

—that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

A MATCHLESS BLEND

● WHEN THE THRILL of a brilliant saber bout brings the crowd to its feet, and you know that you are excited, tense—light up a Camel and learn for yourself how true it is that Camels are the cigarettes for steady smoking.

ENTITLED TO BITE

LOS ANGELES—When Lew Cody's fox terrier bit Anita Goodwin, he had a bite coming, according to a court ruling handed down here. Cody, the actor, won judgment against the $1500 damage suit of Miss Goodwin, who charged Cody's dog bit her in April 1931. An old law then in effect, since changed, permitted a dog to take one bite before being declared vicious and the owner held liable.

Aces, Bulldogs Tangle Tonight

The Aces and the Bulldogs meet this evening in a recreation league game with the Circleville Oils and the Walla Sluggers on the books for a Tuesday evening game at the Commons.

The Aces and Bulldogs have both lost their first game and the contest beginning at 6:30 should be interesting.

Oliver is scheduled to take the hill for the Bulldogs and Maloney for the Aces.

Tuesday night's battle will be between Mushy Callahan and Carl

Purcell. Callahan fanned 16 Aces last week and will probably be a tough nut for the Oils to crack. Mel Mettler has been added to the Oils lineup and will prove a valuable aid especially at the plate.

The Walla team took a pair of Tumbles Sunday afternoon on a muddy field with the Cairo Fruits of Columbus turning the trick. Callahan was treated roughly in the first game and Pud Oliver and Ray Smith were massaged with a shower of base hits in the second.

The score of the first game was 10-4 and as near as could be determined the second was 20-2. A good crowd saw the games.

Bowling News

Miss Evelyn Adkins broke the high score for ladies on the local duck on alleys Saturday with a splendid 184.

Oakley Warner took the men's prize money for the week by breaking into the select class with a 202 count.

The finals of the men's handicap tournament will be bowled Wednesday at 8:30 p. m.

The deadline for first bracket ladies' handicap is Tuesday, July 11. All matches must be played by that time.

BIRDS' TAKE TWO BATTLES

Teachout Too Tough Then Delancy Cracks Triple With Two On To Win.

With Bud Teachout in rare form in the initial game and an eighth inning rally doing the work in the second fray, the Columbus Red Birds took a twin bill and four out of five games from the St. Paul Apostles.

They moved into Minneapolis today for the opening of an important series.

Teachout gave ten hits in the opening but plenty of power in the pinches and three double plays by his infield kept the Saint away from the plate until the ninth inning when Ben Paschal hit the ball onto the Caliseum roof over the left field fence.

The Birds kept pecking away at Yde until they had five runs then broke out in a series of hits to score six in the ninth. They gathered 19 singles with Yde taking the entire punishment.

In the second game Paul Dean was ineffective and the Saints led 4-2 entering the eighth inning. Two hits then a triple off the fence by Bill Delancy who later scored did the work. Heusser was the winning pitcher being in the game when the winning runs were scored by Bill Lee's relief work did the trick. He erased five consecutive batters after relieving Heusser.

Nick Cullop was the day's batting star with six hits out of 11 times to the plate. He hit three singles, two doubles and a home run.

Other association games ended: Toledo, 13, Minneapolis, 9; Minneapolis, 8; Toledo, 3; Milwaukee, 8; Louisville, 2; Kansas City, 8; Indianapolis, 7; Kansas City, 5; Indianapolis, 4.

CHICAGO AGAIN DRUBS GIANTS; RUTH IN FORM

Cub: Grab Double Bill From League Leaders; Cards and Pirates Again.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Packed full of hopes and dreams and tragedy like one of the immortal operas of old Dick Wagner, the National league pennant race today became a throbbing thriller.

The New York Giants continued to sing the title role and remained in first place, but dropping both ends of a twin bill to the Chicago Cubs on Sunday reduced their lead to three and a half games over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cubs moved into third place, only four games behind the Giants and with the Pittsburgh Pirates yipping at their heels.

Stopped in the opener, 4 to 2, by Lon Warneke, who gave the enemy only six safeties, the Giants lost a heart-breaking night cap, 2 to 1, with Freddy Fitzsimmons going into the stratosphere and finally throwing his glove in the general direction of 350,000 howling Chicagoans. The mighty Carl Hubbell was Warneke's victim.

SHORTSTOP NEEDED

The chief trouble with the Giant is that they have been trying to play ball without a competent shortstop. Blondy Ryan, who has been out after a spiking from Joe Medwick at the Polo grounds a week ago, will join the New Yorkers in St. Louis Tuesday and better things, certainly no worse, may be expected.

That broken-down veteran with the spavined feet, over-taxed stomach and weak heart, Mr. George Herman Ruth, cracked three homers for a seasonal total of 22 as the New York Yankees grabbed a double-header, 11 to 7 and 7 to 6, from the Detroit Tigers. Ruffing and Van Atta were the successful mound gems.

Washington defeated Cleveland 3 to 2 for the third straight and remained four games in front in the American league grind. Manush got two hits and every bus rate would result in a higher rate here rather than a lower one.

This conclusion is based on the demand mileage factor involved in the Columbus case. Instead of accepting an average rate rate which would apply to Circleville as well as Columbus and other cities over the state the supreme court held that the rate should be determined on a demand mileage basis which take in several conditions notably the average per customer consumption of gas, the distance from the source of supply, and the peak demand. Gas company heads say that Columbus would profit by such a method of calculation as a far greater extent than possibly any other city in the state.

but rate would result in a higher rate here rather than a lower one.

This conclusion is based on the demand mileage factor involved in the Columbus case. Instead of accepting an average gate rate which would apply to Circleville as well as Columbus and other cities over the state, the supreme court held that the gate rate should be determined on a demand mileage basis which take in several conditions, notably the average per customer consumption of gas and the rate from the source of supply, and the peak demand.

Gas company heads say that Columbus would profit by such a method of calculation to a far greater extent than possibly any other city in the state.

He Was Sore At Himself

By IRVIN S. COBB

TWO gentlemen who had succumbed to indulgence in unwholesome potations were carried to a hotel room by sympathizing bystanders and were undressed and stretched on adjoining beds and left there to sleep it off. Let us call one of them Henry J. Thompson and the other Horace K. Robinson.

When they recovered consciousness it was broad daylight. They stared at each other and mutual suffering drew them together sympathetically.

"Hello," said Thompson.

"Hello," answered Robinson. "Lemme introduce myself," said Thompson. "I'm—I'm—" He hesitated. "Thash funny. For the moment I can't recall just what I am."

"Same here," confessed his fellow-sufferer. "Prob'ly I'll come to me in a minute, but for the moment I don't seem to recall either. Tell you what, I'll look in my vest—got some cards there with my name on 'em."

Groggily Mr. Robinson got upon his feet and made his way to a heap of rumpled clothing upon a chair. He made a mistake here. He was not among his own garments but among the garments of his new room-mate that he fumbled until from a waistcoat pocket he produced a card.

"Here it is," he announced. "Now ever'shing'll be all right." With difficulty he read the words inscribed thereon.

"Henry J. Thompson," he spelled it out. "Don't sound very familiar still that much be me."

Somewhere in the back part of the real Thompson's brain a chord of memory was played upon.

"Ver' glad meetcher, Mr. Henry J. Thompson," he said dreamily.

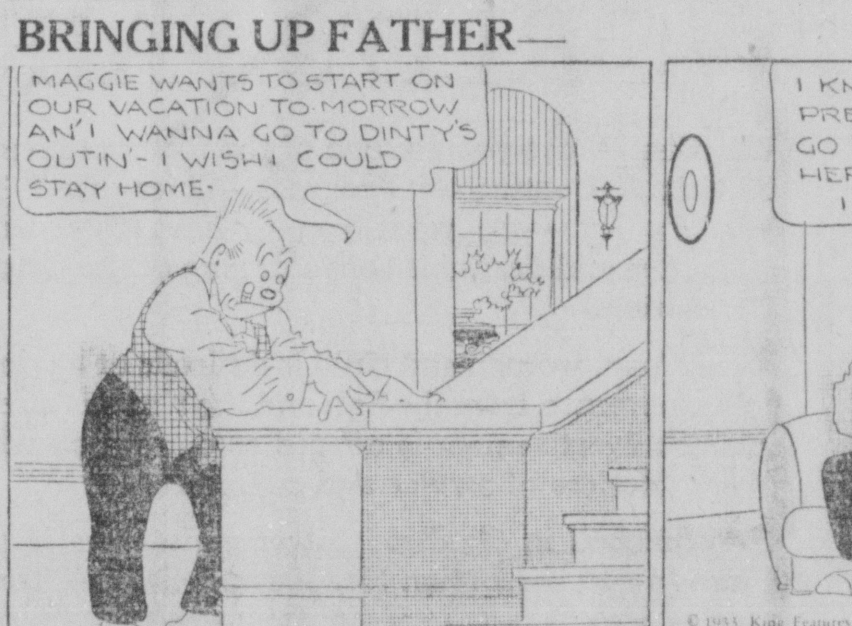

"But shay, listen—thinkin' it over, seems to me I got some relatives by marriage that I don't like."
